“About a year after (my stories began being published), magazine editor George Scithers, suggested to me that since I was so new at being published, I must be very close to what I had to learn to move from fooling around with writing to actually producing professional stories. There are a lot of aspiring writers out there who would like to know just that. Write that book.

Science Fiction Writer's Workshop-I is that book. It's the book I was looking for when I first started writing fiction.” —Barry B. Longyear
