How Crass to Hope Aloud (A Short Story) (Kindle Single) Helen Rubinstein

This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

The city of Kishinev has just come under Soviet rule, and the Jewish cemetery is being razed. Since Nina's husband is incarcerated in a Siberian prison camp, it is up to her to supervise the relocation of her father's and daughter's graves. After that painful event, a neighbor, whose husband is a powerful member of the Party, drops by to ask for help. She wants Nina's mother to use her gypsy-taught tarot skills to assure the neighbor that her missing son is still alive. Nina feels torn—on the one hand, if her mother reads their neighbor's cards, it could invite the unforgiving attention of the Party, but on the other hand, good news might also win them favor. Exhibiting both Old World wit and a touch of melancholy, How Crass to Hope Aloud is a story about not submitting to fate, but choosing it.
