When You See the Emu in the Sky: My Journey of Self-Discovery in the Outback Elizabeth Fuller

Trying to escape from grief over the death of her first husband and her dearest friend's dying from AIDS Elizabeth Fuller embarks with her twelve-year-old son on a long journey, far from their Connecticut home. Seeking answers she has no questions for, she finds herself a participant in "the most meaningful and exciting adventure on earth." Benign spirits visit and converse with her; and then appears Max Eulo, a full-blooded Aborigine, who becomes her friend and guide to the vast, magical Australian Outback.

In this wholly other world, when her heart seems most wrenched and she feels most out of place, Elizabeth Fuller senses a gateway opening--and she enters through it. "The unknown paths are the gifts of life," an Aboriginal spirit counsels her. "Stay close to the earth and you will touch the stars."

And she does--in a journey of the soul that is comforting, transforming, inspiring, loving, and true.

Offers readers a little adventure, a little human pathos, a little magic.--Publishers Weekly.
